From the starting point we head to Entfelden, ride past lush meadows and St Mary's chapel, follow the main road to the right in the direction of Seegatterl.

At the end of the connecting road that we cross, we keep briefly to the right, then left directly into the industrial park and finally after the Lofenbrücke bridge onto the bike path. Along the cool Schwarzlofer river, we cycle comfortably to Seegatterl, where we cross the large parking lot and finally reach the Schwarzlofer forest road (ski run in winter).

Here, next to the ditch of the same name, we always go uphill, after a good stretch past the valley station of the ski lift to the Rossalm, where we are greeted by horses.

We keep right and left again in the direction of the parking lot at the church of St. Johann im Gebirg, leaving the road that opens in the direction of the Dürnbachhorn valley station. Once there, we take the nostalgic chairlift and arrive comfortably and rested at the mountain station at 1607 m.

From here a narrow path goes between the mountain pines up to the summit cross of the Dürnbachhorn (1775 m). We are rewarded with an unforgettable panorama of the surrounding mountains. In ideal weather, the view extends to the Zugspitze. Lake Weitsee is nestled in its valley.

The way back is the same to the mountain station and then we continue along the meadow path towards Dürnbachalmen to the Winklmoos-Alm. Caution, risk of slipping when wet.

Those who want to extend their hike, are sure-footed and have a head for heights, have sturdy shoes, follow the ridge eastwards on the narrow path to the junction Finsterbach / Heutal valley, another steep descent to the Heutallift lift station.

Head west in the steep forest area, descent to the Finsterbachalm. After the Alm on an easy forest path back to the valley station of the railway, continue with the bikes on the road in the direction of the parking lot (on the left the Maria Himmelfahrt chapel), we turn right at the Bundeswehr hut, and follow the path to Seegatterl and back to Reit im Winkl to the starting point.
